Paul Kershaw Associate Professor with UBC's Human Early Learning Partnership (HELP) is coming to Cranbrook to discuss how we can make a Canada that works for all generations!

We'll be gathering to hear and discuss how it's become harder to raise a family in Canada, but easier to retire. How the generation raising young kids is squeezed for time at home because many families require two incomes, squeezed for income because often even two-earner wages are not kept pace with housing prices, and squeezed for services like child care because they're not available or are too expensive. WTF? Where's The Family in that?

Come ready to eat, drink, laugh and be merry – and talk about what we can do to make a better deal for the generation raising kids.

Paul Kershaw is a farmer morning and night. By day, he is an academic, public speaker, media contributor and volunteer. In these latter roles, he is one of Canada's leading thinkers about family policy, receiving two national prizes from the Canadian Political Science Association for his research.

Child care subsidies are available. Contact Keri 250.427.5663
